MOUNTAIN VIEW COUNTRY CLUB

To many of those to whom Greensboro has become a regular summer home, as well as to such as each year seek an ideal place for spending a summer vacation, the golf and tennis afforded by membership in the Mountain View Country Club are decided attractions. Organized under a definite constitution and given its present name in 1909, the golf club dates its existence to the summer of 1899. In this year a few golf enthusiasts, among whom were Prof. A. L. Wheeler, John F. Elliot, Benjamin H. Sanborn, Dr. Gilman Wheeler, George W. Morrow, Prof. Frank E. Woodruff, and Prof. J. W. Votey, laid out a nine-hole golf course, renting portions of the pastures belonging to H. S. and A. E. Tolman. A small frame building was erected as a shelter and place for leaving the golf bags. Prof. Wheeler was the first president, being succeeded by John F. Elliot and Benjamin H. Sanborn, the last named having acted as such since 1904. The present officers are Benjamin H. Sanborn, of Wellesley, Mass., president; Rev. Charles F. Carter, of Hartford, Conn., vice-president, and Francis A. Bagally, of Adams, Mass., secretary and treasurer. In the early years of golf in Greensboro, the cattle and the golfers shared the use of the grounds, the cattle in the morning, the golfers in the afternoon. The popularity of the game so increased, however, that beginning in 1905 the human devotees of the sport have taken possession of the links throughout the day, and the cows have continued their browsing, on seeming intimate friendship with those who have become accustomed to drive their golf balls over these moving animal bunkers. The club house has twice been enlarged and is now well-appointed to meet the needs of a country club. In 1908 the first of the tennis courts was built and last year the second one. And now both tennis courts and golf course on any pleasant day are crowded with players. Some 60 families are represented on the membership list of the club, besides many visitors who come attracted for a day's pleasure on the links. There are few courses anywhere more beautifully located than these. The view of lake and mountains, sweeping from the lower ranges of the White Mountains in the southeast, around through the south and west to the Green Mountains, with Mount Mansfield plainly in sight due west and sharp-pointed Lowell Mountain in the distance far to the north over Caspian Lake, gives a panorama which, with its wonderful cloud effects, is almost beyond description. The matches with clubs of other places prove a feature of the summer golf. Contests with the Montpelier, Barre and St. Johnsbury clubs are on the schedule each year. Beginning in 1909, a Round Robin Tournament has been held each year, the three clubs in this triple-club match being Montpelier, Barre and Greensboro. The matches are held successively in the three places, each team plays the other two teams. The winning club is the one winning the most points in the two matches it plays. The valuable silver cup, first offered in 1909 to the club winning it three times, became the permanent property of the Mountain View club in 1913, having been won by its team in the years 1909, 1912 and 1913. The second cup was contested for in 1914 at Barre, and this year at Greensboro, each team succeeding in winning the contest on its own links. The Mountain View Country Club numbers among its players representatives of members of prominent clubs from all over the country, and is naturally able to put up quite an argument in inter-club contests. Pleasant as is this feature of its club life, its especial contribution to making Greensboro so attractive, is the royal good fellowship of the many who enjoy themselves in wholesome sport under such charming conditions of nature and human nature. THIRTY-NINE YEARS IN CAMP

One feature of the camps at Caspian lake is the permanency of the homes. People here do not come for a single season to enjoy a round of gaily and then flit somewhere else to enjoy the noise, the dress and the dirt of another "resort." They come to stay through the season and then come back year after year for the quiet, the rest and the soothing pleasure of wood, lake and field. Eight families have been at the camp for 20 or more years, while a much larger number have been here for 15 years or more. Dr. Gilman A. Wheeler of Boston is the oldest resident of the Camp in point of residence, he having come here for 39 successive seasons. He has seen some great changes about the lake. His father began to come here 39 years ago in the spring for a few days' fishing for those famed "square tails." About the same time some men from Montpelier came for the same purpose and camped on the east shore of the pond. They used to make such good catches that they cheerfully underwent the discomforts of a tent and brush bed spring after spring. Apparently the Montpelier men built the first shelter to be used on the shore of the pond but Dr. Wheeler's father, Avery G. Wheeler of Randolph, was a close second. He built the first cottage in the Randolph Camp, the pioneer settlement of cottagers on the lake, 25 years ago. At that time the land had little value. It was owned by farmers whose farms bordered the lake and being covered with a fringe of forest was not useful even for pasture. Among the owners of these farms at that time were Judge Henry S. Tolman, Mr. Ingalls, Charles Kilburne, the farm now owned by Mr. Calderportion of his farm in his possession. A farmer on the east shore of the lake bought his farm about 25 years ago giving $650 for it. He has $3,000 worth of lots off it and still owns all his tillable land for a farm. Another place was sold for $800 about 10 years ago and the new owner has about $10,000 worth of lots off from that. There are few if any desirable lots obtainable now. Dr. Wheeler says about 2,000 people visit the lake each season now, and they have made great changes in the business life of the village. The postoffice has been raised from the fourth class to the second class and the salary of the postmaster more than doubled. He remembers the days when men like Clark and Felix made their living catching trout from the lake and sending them to the city markets. All of that is stopped now and the fishing is well protected by local fish and game association. The local people and campers are planting thousands of fingerlings and fry each year in the tributary streams of the lake and hope to keep the fishing good. Camp life about the lake has been very free from disasters. There has not been a single fire since the first cottage was built 35 years ago. There have been but three lives lost on the lake since the campers began coming here. On July 19 of this year Kenneth Dodge of Morrisville suffered an attack of heart failure while swimming in the lake and sank. The body was quickly recovered but life was extinct. On August 16, 1899, occurred a mysterious tragedy when two lives were lost. That evening Rev. H. L. Veazey of St. Johnsbury and Miss Ellen F. Calhoun of Chicago, his fiancée, went out in a boat late in the evening for a moonlight ride and that was the last time they were ever seen. Mr. Veazey's sister thought she heard him call about 11 o'clock in the evening and started some young men to search for him. Nothing was found however and it was not till the next wood, the Miller farm, the Richards farm, Mrs. Whitelaw's place, the Haines farm and the Austin farm. The pioneer cottagers were people from Randolph induced to come there by Mr. Wheeler. They first leased the land for the cottages from Judge Tolman for a nominal sum each year. Feeling that a change in ownership of the Tolman farm might rob the cottagers of their buildings, Mr. Wheeler asked Judge Tolman to sell him all of the tract on which the Randolph cottages were located and he consented to do so. The price was very low compared with present day prices. Mr. Wheeler did not go into it as a money making venture but parceled out the land between the different cottagers and sold them the plot of land desired at a pro rata price with the purchase price. Cottagers then became landed proprietors of the place. The development of Aspenhurst, further north on the west shore of the lake, came next. Then Messrs. Kinney and Smith settled on Birch Point and in the later years the settlement at the head of the lake has been built up. Five new cottages are going up there now, they being the only new cottages built this year. Prof. Mitchell of Columbia is building three, Dr. Clinton Bagg of New York another and a Yale man the fifth. The farmers have made thousands of dollars selling cottage sites to the campers. The highest price paid for a single lot is $2,500 paid to a farmer who purchased his whole farm for $1,800 and still has all the useful day that the boat, Miss Calhoun's coat and folded shawl with the oars in place were found. Later Mr. Veazey's cap was found floating on the water. Every method known of locating the bodies was employed but there was never a trace found of them and somewhere in the cold depths of the lake it is supposed the death mystery of these two young people lies buried. Good Tribute to Willoughby. The midsummer outing of the Vermont Press association will be held next Thursday and Friday. The rendezvous will be at Barton, and Friday will be spent in an excursion to Willoughby Lake. The quill pushers who go there for the first time will be surprised at the entrancing view which is revealed on approaching the lake from the north or south. A Brattleboro man who returned recently from an extended motor car journey through Canada and New England said that of over 20 lakes which he visited none equaled the scenic beauty of Willoughby.—Brattleboro Reformer. Hear What the Farmer Says. In an effort to pacify the farmers, the Democratic press asserts that taking off the duty of five cents a dozen and admitting 72,000,000 eggs free of duty did not reduce the price the farmer receives. If the importation of 72,000,000 eggs didn't injuriously compete with the American farmer, why did the Chinese producer send them here after the tariff was removed, but not before? It is true the imported eggs are small in size and deteriorated by age, but so much the worse, for they serve that much more effectively in holding down the price the farmer receives for good eggs.—Manchester Mirror and American. Don't be lured by a low price when you want good printing.
